

Application Studio

➔ Use Application Studio to perform key processes more efficiently and deliver important business intelligence whenever and wherever it's needed in your organization.

Be enterprising.

Even with sophisticated IT infrastructures, many organizations still encounter problems finding the information they need, when and how they need it. To overcome these obstacles, enterprising companies rely on Infor™ PM Application Studio to access, filter, analyze, and publish information throughout their organization—anytime, anywhere. It does all this by merging data from multiple sources and formats into a single report, helping these corporations quickly transform raw data into valuable information.

Leverage experience.

For more than 30 years, Infor's performance management solutions have helped leading companies optimize the effectiveness of their strategic management, planning and budgeting, forecasting, financial consolidation, and financial reporting processes. A key component of Infor PM, Application Studio enables companies to gather information and share knowledge throughout the organization. This robust solution accomplishes this by accessing data from leading OLAP and relational sources or other semi-structured data. What's more, because Application Studio quickly integrates information via standard interfaces like OLE DB, ODBO, and others, you can simultaneously present information from different data sources or vendors in a single report. All reports are instantly web-enabled and can be deployed using standard web browsers. Application Studio is integrated with Infor PM Business Process Applications. This way, you can build reports for production reporting, budgeting, and planning.

Get business specific.

Gathering and delivering better information when and where it's needed requires comprehensive capabilities to support local administration, reporting requirements, and end-user modeling. That's why so many companies look to Application Studio for important intelligence gained by accessing, filtering, analyzing, and publishing information throughout their organization into a single report.

Essential background information

Evaluating business processes takes more than numbers alone. Essential background information on customers, contacts, and more is often stored in text files, spreadsheets, emails, web sites, or other semi-structured files. Application Studio enables you to supplement your reports with links to these relevant documents. It integrates innovative ideas and concepts to support day-to-day decision-making. Also, since this solution adapts to your company's structures, you can immediately begin to tap your current data sources. On top of that, because you have advanced technology—and minimal system maintenance—with Application Studio, you'll reduce your operating costs.

Advanced technology in a familiar working environment

With Application Studio you enjoy high-level functionality in a comfortable spreadsheet environment. You can leverage your spreadsheet skills, while avoiding the limitations of individual spreadsheets. Wizards and tip assistants offer additional support and ensure that you can quickly begin to leverage the full functionality of this proven solution. Innovative hyperblocks assure that changes in your various structures will automatically be updated in your report.

Access rights and user profiles

Through Application Studio's detailed access rights and user profiles, you only view the information you need for your particular tasks. Its list concept allows each individual to prepare and filter raw data into specialized information. Ad hoc reporting guarantees that you can easily create analyses and reports much like with a pivot table. Moreover, you'll publish reports quickly and easily in your corporate intranet and on the web. Also, since data is exported into pure HTML, client-side work is minimal.

See results now.

Application Studio enables you to perform key processes more efficiently by helping you quickly gather information and share knowledge throughout your organization. And you'll be able to deliver this important business intelligence whenever and wherever it's needed. Let this dynamic solution help your company reap rapid results through:

- Enhanced functionality
- Detailed access rights and user profiles
- Linked data from different sources in a single report
