SunSystems Consultant

“25 Years of Excellence”

What made you to stay and grow with the company for such a long time?

Anita Beck

“For me, the most important thing in any job is to have continuous challenges, opportunities to learn something new, and a sense of freedom in how I work.

Over the years, there’s always been something different and stimulating to do here, which kept the work interesting and rewarding.

Working on diverse projects across various industries has often felt like working for several different companies – each one bringing new experiences and lessons. Beyond the work itself, it’s been a pleasure to collaborate with clever, kind colleagues from many countries.

The company has given me great opportunities to improve myself, learn from others, travel early in my career, and later enjoy the flexibility of remote work – long before it became the norm.”

Looking back, how has your role as a SunSystems consultant evolved over the years?

Anita Beck

“I started as a SunSystems consultant focusing mainly on functional aspects. Over time, I became increasingly involved in the more technical side of the software and integration between different softwares.

As technology evolved, I continuously adapted and expanded my knowledge through self-study and hands-on experience.

I learned how to see a project as a whole – from understanding client requirements to managing expectations, coordinating with teams, and ensuring successful delivery.

My approach has become more structured and proactive: anticipating potential issues, communicating clearly with stakeholders, and helping clients make informed decisions.”

What skills have been most important for success in your role?

Anita Beck

“The key skills have been problem-solving and effective communication with people from different areas – finance, logistics, IT, and development.

Listening carefully to everyone’s needs is essential to finding solutions that make daily work smoother for all, and keeping in mind that the best solution is not always what the client requests first.

Patience is also important, as every client and situation is unique and requires understanding and persistence.”

What do you enjoy most about your work as a SunSystems consultant?

Anita Beck

“What I enjoy most is solving problems together with talented colleagues and clients. Every project brings new challenges and opportunities to learn, and it’s very satisfying to see how our work makes clients’ daily operations easier and more efficient.

Working with SunSystems, Q&A and Infor OS, I can achieve the required solution by myself with only small technical and very basic developer knowledge, therefore I can work quickly and try different methods before choosing and presenting the best solution to the client.”
